REASSESSING THE INDIGENOUS
AMERICAN HERITAGE IN ITALY

Castello del Buonconsiglio. Monumenti e collezioni provinciali.

Via Bernardo Clesio, 5, 38122, Trento

Form compiled by: Roberta Zuech (head of the collections and of the photographic archive), in collaboration with Anna Bottesi.

Introduction

The American collections are mostly the result of donations: during the second half of the nineteenth century the citizens of Trento wished to take an active part in the creation of a Civic Museum, which was opened to the public in 1856 as an appendix to the Trento library. Within the collections of the Civic Museum, founded to gather evidence of local culture, history and art, there also converged strange and “exotic” objects donated to the Municipality by people from Trento who were working abroad. The collections of the Civic Museum were transferred to the National Museum (today the Museo Castello del Buonconsiglio) at the end of the First World War, when the Castello del Buonconsiglio was converted from a barracks into a museum.

Collector	Moser (Don Antonio), assistant priest in the parish of Cortaccia
Cultural areas	Amazon
Ethnic group / community / cultural sphere	Peoples of the Rio Napo
Description of the collection	A dorsal ornament belonging to the Achuar people of Ecuador, consisting of a textile band to be placed on the forehead to which a second band is attached, the length of a person's back and intended to fall along it. This second band is made up of eight segments decorated with small hollow cylindrical bones inserted vertically and separated by rows of black seeds. At the lower end are attached pendants of black seeds, teeth (probably monkey teeth) and beetle elytra. It is thought that this piece may have formed part of the donation that Don Luigi Sartori delivered to the museum in 1879 and which included an "entire Indian costume from New Granada: dress, cloak, belt, and a curious head ornament and two
